Santa Claus Coming To Downtown Section

Downtown Business Men's Association Plans for Usual Community Christmas Tree With Plenty of Smaller Trees and Abundance of Lights—Santa Will Have Gifts of Candy for Boys and Girls.

Christmas decoration for the downtown business section, Santa Claus's visits with candy for children, and matters concerning attractive merchandise offerings to shoppers were the chief concerns of Downtown Business Men's Association members at the meeting held Tuesday night in the Cornell building on Ferry street. The gigantic Community Christmas tree, which features the decoration of downtown streets every Yuletide season, is again to be the joy of numerous kiddies this year. The big tree will be strung with electric lights of various hues, with the scintillating star of Bethlehem shining from the lofty peak of the big cedar. Santa Claus is to have loads and loads of candy this year for all his little friends. The business men do not know just what day he will arrive downtown with the sweets but expect a letter from him soon. The merchants will let the children know through The Freeman, when Santa is to be downtown. The Downtown Business Men's Association invites every little boy and girl to meet Santa at the Community Christmas Tree this year.

Small Trees for Every Pole.
In addition to the Community Christmas Tree, smaller ones will be placed on every pole in the downtown section. This will add to the artistic decoration scheme planned by the merchants and is expected to promote a real holiday spirit. Of course the merchants gave special consideration to plans for offering attractive values to Christmas shoppers. The Downtown Business Men's Association members were unanimous in saying that there will be high-class values to fit every pocketbook during the Christmas season. The merchants invite all to shop in their stores, where, they promise, most economic purchasing may be done.

Committees were appointed to get busy on Christmas plans. Publicity will be taken care of by Jack Greenwald, purchasing by Nicholas Stock and Henry Lehner, finance by Herman Kunst and Isaac Jacobson. Harry Kaplan, president of the association, is general chairman.

George Cino Wrecks Blinker

Meadow Street Man Fined $10 and Sentenced to Five Days in Jail for Driving Without License—Other Cases Adjudged.

George Cino of Meadow street, arrested Tuesday evening after the automobile he was driving had wrecked the traffic blinker at Broadway and Railroad avenue, was fined $10 and sentenced to five days in police court when found guilty of operating a car without the necessary license papers. He was arrested by Officer Van Buren.

While driving on Broadway Tuesday evening Cino ran his car into the big traffic blinker, moving it fully twenty-five feet up the street. Cino's auto was also damaged by the crash. An adjournment was taken in the case of James Hicks, arrested on a charge of driving without a license, charged her husband with non-support.

The trial of Henry "Blue" Thomas, the negro arrested on a charge of stealing a revolver from Charles Dasher, was adjourned to Friday morning in police court. An adjournment to Wednesday, November 21, was taken in the hearing of Dr. Elvin Chipp of Clinton avenue, who was arrested recently charged with operating an automobile while intoxicated.

LUMINOUS PAINT CAUSES DEATH OF INVENTOR

East Orange, N. J., Nov. 14 (AP).—Dr. Sabin Von Sochocky died today, a victim of the luminous paint which he had invented for the painting of watch dials. Deaths of a half dozen women who were employed in the plant to paint watch dials, have been attributed to the assimilation of radio active substances.

General Booth Improved.
London, Nov. 14 (AP).—General William Bramwell Booth, head of the Salvation Army, who has been under treatment for nervous prostration, was stated to have shown a slight improvement in his condition this morning. He passed a better night.

Hoover to Visit Mexico During Good Will Tour

Whether it Will Be the First or the Last of the Republics on the Itinerary Is Yet to Be Decided—Now Receiving Callers.

Stanford University, Cal., Nov. 14 (AP).—Herbert Hoover will visit Mexico during the good will tour of Latin-America, on which he will embark next Monday from San Pedro, but whether it will be the first or the last of the republics on the itinerary is yet to be decided.

Alternate plans are under consideration, one calling for a stop at Acapulco, en route to South America, and the other for a call at Vera Cruz on the return trip from Rio de Janeiro to Florida. Should the call be made at Acapulco, which is about 200 miles almost due south of Mexico City, President Calles and Dwight W. Morrow, the American ambassador, probably would welcome the President-elect there during a one-day stay of the good will ship, the battleship Maryland.

If the visit is deferred until near the journey's end, the battleship Utah, upon which the last leg of the voyage will be made, would proceed to Vera Cruz and the President-elect would go to the Mexican capital by rail to be welcomed there by Emilio Portes-Gil, who will succeed to the Mexican Presidency December 1.

Will Call on Various Presidents.
While all details of the itinerary of the Latin-American trip still are being carefully guarded, it is the belief here that Mr. Hoover would prefer to make an official call on the President at Mexico City, since he will call on the Presidents of other Republics in their capitals. The rail trip to Mexico City also would give him an opportunity to see and study part of the country.

With Acapulco eliminated from the itinerary, the Maryland would proceed from San Pedro direct to Balboa, at the Pacific entrance to the Panama Canal, a matter of six or seven days steaming for the battleship at her usual cruising speed of 16 knots.

To Study Itinerary.
After spending yesterday in conference and on a shopping expedition to San Francisco, Hoover turned today to a detailed study of the southern itinerary, but it was indicated that a final decision on all points would await the arrival here of Henry P. Fletcher, American ambassador to Italy, who will accompany Mr. Hoover as the official representative of the state department.

Captain Victor A. Kimberly, commander of the Maryland, was to discuss with Hoover today various angles of the voyage to Valparaiso, whence the party will make the overland journey to Buenos Aires, thence the Utah will convey them to Rio de Janeiro and northward to Florida.

Some of Tuesday's Visitors.
The President-elect now is receiving callers. Among his visitors has been Senator L. Odell of Nevada, member of the Senate naval committee, who favors an expansion of the nation's cruiser fleet even beyond the limits which were contained in the House bill which is to be pressed for action in the Senate at the coming session.

The almost simultaneous visit of William J. Donovan, assistant to the attorney general of the United States, and Mrs. Mabel Willbrandt, an assistant attorney general, at the Hoover home yesterday, renewed political discussions around Palo Alto. Some of the prognostications believe that Donovan, a close personal friend of the President-elect, will succeed John G. Sargent as attorney general on March 4. Mrs. Willbrandt, whose home is in California, said she had called on the President-elect simply to pay her respects, and that there was no political significance to her visit.

Daniel Shea's Skull Fractured

Brakeman on West Shore Railroad Injured Tuesday Night When His Head Struck Water Plug at Alsen—In Kingston Hospital.

Daniel Shea of 1609 Hackensack avenue, North Bergen, N. J., a brakeman employed by the West Shore Railroad, is confined to the City of Kingston Hospital with a fracture of the skull sustained Tuesday evening at Alsen when his head struck a water plug while the crew was at work switching cars at that place. He was rushed to Saugerties, where he was attended by Dr. James Krom and then brought to Kingston by train and conveyed to the hospital in the city ambulance, where he is being attended by Dr. Frederick Snyder.

From the story as learned he was struck by a water plug as he attempted to look out of the window of a caboose while the train crew of which he was a member were busy switching cars at Alsen. At the hospital an X-ray was taken which showed that the skull was fractured. This morning while he still remained unconscious his condition was reported as good as could be expected.

Two Vessels Land With 148 Survivors of the Vestris

Captain Carey Criticised by Some Survivors

Rescued Passengers and Members of Crew Severe in References to Captain's Delay in Sending Out S O S and in Ordering Life Boats Out.

New York, Nov. 14 (AP).—Criticism of Captain William J. Carey, master of the Vestris, were voiced today by some of the 125 survivors of the liner who reached port on the American Shipper.

Rescued passengers and members of the crew alike were rather severe in their references to the captain's delay in sending out the first S O S on Monday morning, and in ordering the life boats out.

Captain Frederick Sorenson, a passenger of the Vestris, who holds a master's license, was particularly bitter in his criticism of what he called the "criminal neglect" which he said marked the disaster.

"I know about ships," he said. "The reason the vessel foundered is criminal neglect. The captain did everything wrong. He should have had ships standing by us long before he did. Not a passenger should have been sent overboard before other vessels were standing by."

Carlos Quiros, chancellor to the Argentine consulate general, who was a passenger on the Vestris and was saved by the Berlin, said that the outstanding hero of the disaster was Second Steward Alfred Duncan of the Vestris.

Duncan, he said, conducted himself with utmost composure throughout the trying hours and helped many of the women and children to the boats.

Order Not Perfect at All Times.
Quiros said that perfect order did not prevail at all times, in one instance the negro passengers from the third class taking a lifeboat all to themselves in their haste to get away from the sinking ship.

There was some difficulty with lowering the lifeboats, according to Quiros. Two boats were hung with the davits and then it was found impossible to lower them to the water. The passengers had to scramble back to the tilting water-washed deck to wait their turns in other boats.

Not a life would have been lost, some of the passengers said, had the boats been safe and properly equipped, or had they been launched before the awkward listing of the ship. The sharp angle which she took made every descent into a life craft a trip of terror and confusion, it was said.

Pale, Drawn Faces of Survivors.
The experience they had been through was written sharply on the pale, drawn faces of the survivors brought by the American Shipper. Several passengers had medical attention, especially those who had been long exposed to wind and water as they awaited rescue in the life boats.

Some said that the friendly gulf stream, a warm current, had been responsible for the saving of many lives, for the water that drenched their clothing was warm.

Saw Husband Go Down in Lifeboat.
Mrs. Earl Devore saw the lifeboat in which her husband, an automobile racer, was sitting go down. The small crew of negro seamen in her own boat, she said, refused to go to the aid of those struggling in the water after their craft had been lost.

It would be dangerous to let so many additional human beings clamor into their boat, the negroes told her, Mrs. Devore reported.

Alfredo Ramos, an Argentine student who was returning home on the Vestris after a vacation here and in Europe, told of the horror of passengers placed in lifeboats which could not be lowered to the water.

He was in one of four such craft he said, swung out over the waves on the davits and then left hanging there. He with some of the others took to the water, trusting to their life belts. He never saw the others again and had no knowledge whether or they had been saved like him or had been lost.

Says Responsibility Rests With Captain.
E. J. Marvin of Montclair, N. J., a representative of the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey, said the responsibility would rest with Captain Carey. Marvin said the skipper had been derelict in not summoning aid 24 hours earlier.

Marvin also declared that had the lifeboats been sound and properly launched there would have been no loss of life, since the water, though rough from a recent storm, was warm. However, he said the sea was at no time so turbulent that the boats could not have been navigated.

Many Blame Captain Carey, Who Went Down With His Ship, For Indecision—Loss of Life Believed To Total 108—Steamer Sank When Only 90 Had Been Launched In Lifeboats—Five Survivors Go To Hospitals.

New York, Nov. 14 (AP).—The steamer Vestris sank when only about 80 of its 328 passengers and crew had been launched in lifeboats, after two boat loads of women and children had been hurled into the sea, most of them to die, and while the rest were leaping from the ship's slides and swimming for their lives lest they be dragged down with the foundering hull.

Survivors told today that the traditions of the sea had been scrupulously observed as to giving first thought to women and children, but fate had turned gallantry into disaster. And they told an appalling story of inadequate preparation for disaster.

The first two boats were filled with women and children—there were 37 women and 13 children on board and the crew started to lower away. Then the sinking ship lurched, the boats crashed against its side and women and children poured into the boiling waves. Reports available today indicate that all the children perished but 10 of the women were saved.

On the whole, the 125 survivors arriving today on the American Shipper and the 23 on the Berlin agreed that in intention the officers and crew of the Vestris had been beyond criticism, but many of them blamed the captain, who went down with his ship, for indecision which they saw as one principal reason for the large loss of life, believed to total 108.

The ship began to list on Saturday night, they said, and its condition grew more serious steadily throughout Sunday, and yet no distress call was sent until the middle of Monday morning and as a result no rescue ships were on the scene until many hours after the ship sank at 1:30 that afternoon.

Many passengers said that when the captain did decide to abandon ship, shortly after the first S O S call, the tackle of the lifeboats was found to be faulty. It took hours to lower them, the ones with the women and children were crashed, and another was stove in and put away with a gaping hole in its side.

Two Boats Successfully Launched.
Only two boats were successfully launched although others broke loose as the ship sank and were caught by swimming survivors. The greater number of passengers and crew had to fling themselves into the water. One man told of seeing the ship sink two minutes after he jumped from the deck and there was a general feeling that others may not have jumped in time and were carried down with the captain.

Of those who did get into the water and survive the actual sinking of the ship the majority of those eventually saved were members of the crew, the greatest loss of life being among the passengers.

This was thought to have some explanation in the theory that the crew were men accustomed to hard labor, more able to withstand the hardship of those freezing hours in the waves, and not to any general effort on the part of the crew to take positions of comparative safety in the boats rightfully belonging by the law of the sea to the passengers.

Five Go to Hospital.
Ten minutes after the American Shipper docked, five survivors were on their way to hospitals. They were: Henrietta Cuhbin, 45, stewardess, New York, was suffering from exhaustion and exposure. Ernest Carpenter of Liverpool, 39, had a broken leg. George Ansell, 35, of Liverpool, storekeeper of the Vestris, had a broken arm. Lloyd Keizer, of Washington, D. C., two fingers amputated, and William Hogg, of Liverpool, assistant bedroom steward, both arms broken.

Captain and Operator Believed Lost.
Captain William J. Carey, master of the Vestris, and Neal O'Loughlin, the radio operator who stood by his post until the deck of the ship was awash, apparently went down with the ship.

"Good-bye, W C K," was the last heard from O'Loughlin as he signed off with Tuckerton, N. J., station of the Radio Marine Corporation, which had been answering the last faint calls from the Vestris's emergency radio set.

Lampert and Holt officials, however, were still hoping that Captain Carey, O'Loughlin and others of the missing had been saved. They pointed out that many small vessels were attracted to the scene of the disaster and they believed that some of these might have picked up survivors and be on their way to land, being unable to report their rescues due to weak radio equipment or none at all.

Believed All Living Survivors Found.
Vice Admiral M. M. Taylor, aboard his flagship Wyoming, believed that all the living survivors had been found. In a report to naval officials at Washington he said: "Chief officer of the Vestris on American Shipper stated that eight boats and one makeshift raft left Vestris. One boat capsized and some of her people picked up on this and other ships. Other boats picked up by ships arriving prior to Wyoming. Raft evidently broken up due to heavy seas. Boat capsized about 6 p. m. and people had been afloat since then. Number of dead sighted. Not thought possible any living and will discontinue search this evening and return to Norfolk."

The admiral was commanded to stay on the scene and continue the search through the night, even though he believed it hopeless. Many on shore, however, agreed with Admiral Taylor, believing the many hours in the water would have been too much for any persons to survive.

The eight persons rescued by the Wyoming, five women and three men, were taken from the sea where they were found floating in life belts.

Fragmentary Stories.
Fragmentary stories of the horror on the descent from the sloping decks of the Vestris into a rough sea and the afternoon and night drift in the small lifeboats have come from survivors. One man, who was rescued by the Berlin from a floating spar to which he had clung through the night, told of seeing a woman and child drift in a lifeboat. Although the Berlin put about immediately and retraced the course the man was believed to have floated no trace of the woman or child could be found.

Woodstock Man Victim Of Vestris Disaster

New York, Nov. 14 (AP).—The destroyers Arushnet and Tucker are steaming in from the scene of the Vestris' wreck today with the bodies of eight victims.

All of the bodies are those of men. Four have been identified. They are: Ralph P. Whitehead, of Woodstock, N. Y., and Tom Jones, harriman on the Vestris, both aboard the Arushnet. Jose Gonzalez Rios, of New Bedford, Mass., and Raymond Garcia, Pelal, both of the Tucker.

Rios was accompanied by his wife and two-year-old son. The name of Pelal does not appear on either the passenger or crew lists. Each destroyer has two other bodies as well, unidentified.

ELEANOR GUNN
ON FASHIONSTHE HIGH NECK NIGHT
GOWN AND THE OPEN
MESH STOCKING—

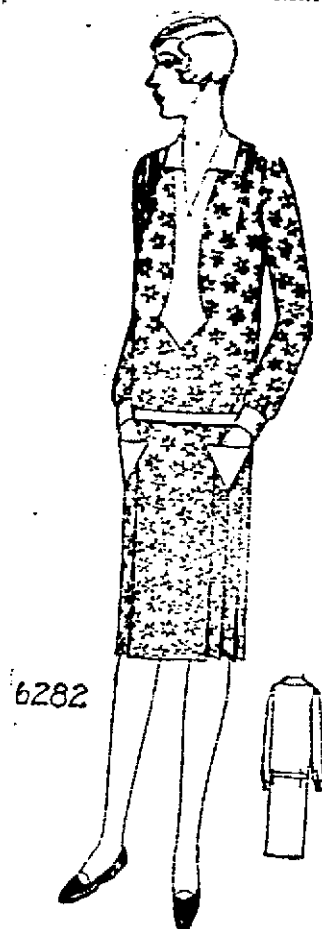

New York—From time to time gowns are capable of arousing something like polite interest in the necked and even long sleeved gowns. Inconspicuous though they appear, models of such prime travelers. They are also practical for houses not equipped with central heating. Even women edited to night dresses find a time and place for such a gown which makes it something of a boon to those who are searching about for the unusual Yuletide gift. The high neck, sleeveless gown is something of a novelty and not easy to explain except on the score of novelty.

The very open mesh evening stocking presents itself as another gift suggestion. For some time now there has been a small rebellion against the monotony of plain silk hose in colors, varied enough actually but much the same in effect. The open mesh evening stocking, not to be confused with the open work lace-hosiery of another generation offers a relief from this monotony.

Two Plead Guilty
In County Court

In the case of The People vs. Halsey Hines of Walker Valley, charged with assault, second degree, a plea of guilty to assault, third degree, was accepted by the county court today when District Attorney Traver moved the case for trial. Hines was represented by Earl H. Houghtaling of Walden, who stated that his client was willing to change his former plea of not guilty to that of guilty to a lesser charge. Judge Fowler sentenced Hines to a term of five months in the county jail.

The case of The People vs. Harold Decker was not moved for trial as Lloyd R. LeFevre, attorney for Decker, was engaged in trial work in Sullivan county. The case, a charge of grand larceny, first degree, will be moved Thursday morning for trial.

In the case of The People vs. Maceo Nash, colored, charged with having stolen a revolver from a man in the town of Ulster, the defendant changed his former plea of not guilty to guilty. Thomas F. Connelin appeared for Nash. Judge Fowler postponed imposition of sentence until Friday morning. Nash has no conviction for carrying a concealed weapon against his record.

Court then adjourned until 10 o'clock Thursday morning at which time the Decker case will probably be moved.

Attar of Skunk Perfumes Air

Some Downtown Street Closures Called to Attention of Board of Health Tuesday Evening—Health Code Regulations to Be Enforced.

It was attar of skunk, not attar of roses that was brought to the attention of the members of the board of health at the regular monthly meeting held in the Central Fire Station on Tuesday evening by Dr. E. H. Loughran, city health officer, who was directed to enforce the provisions of the health code.

Dr. Loughran said that some of the downtown hide dealers had been making a practice of salting hides in garages, and that they had been told to cease that practice. They complied for a while but are now again doing it. Local butchers, according to Dr. Loughran, have a dispute regarding prices with local rendering plants and as a result are selling the refuse from the butcher shops to a man from New Jersey. Under the city health code this refuse has to be disposed of within twenty-four hours.

Skunks are now in season and dealers in skunk hides are beginning to skin skunks and the odor is very apparent on certain downtown streets.

After hearing Dr. Loughran the board directed him to see to it that the health provisions be enforced.

The balance of the monthly meeting was devoted to a discussion as to adopting a price scale for making laboratory milk tests for the town in Ulster county. Under the new state milk code all milk must be tested for bacteria in a laboratory and as Kingston has the only laboratory in Ulster county the work of testing the milk will likely all be done here. It was brought out that commercial laboratories make a charge of $2 for a test. The health board is not desirous of making a profit on milk tests but desire to charge only a necessary amount to cover the actual cost of the test. The board will ascertain what other counties in New York state are charging for this work, and will then adopt a rate scale at a special meeting of the board.

Bills and claims were read and audited and the reports of the officers, which will be found elsewhere, were approved and filed.

The board then adjourned. Mayor Dempsey presided with Dr. Fred Huhne, Dr. Joseph Jacobson, Dr. Frederic Holcomb, and Mrs. T. J. Hickey, members of the board, in attendance.

Persons from All Ranks of Life on List of Missing

New York, Nov. 14.—Persons from all ranks of life, many of them prominent in their fields are among the missing passengers of the ill-fated Liner Vestris.

Among them are:

Major Yoshio Inouye, enroute to Buenos Aires to assume the post of Japanese consul. Mrs. Inouye was picked up by the battleship Wyoming.

Earl F. DeVore and Norman K. Batten, noted automobile racing drivers, who were on their way to South America to take part in a number of meets. DeVore had with him his $40,000 racing machine, the "Nickel Plate Special." DeVore lived at Altoona, Pa., and Batten at Dayton, Ohio.

RED CROSS NURSES AID IN HURRICANE DISASTER

In addition to their year around work in the Public Health field, the Public Health nurses of the American Red Cross have answered a number of calls to combat epidemics, and in disaster work during the year just ending, the Red Cross states.

Their greatest task was in the relief following the West Indies hurricane when 20 nurses were despatched to Florida and 32 to Porto Rico, to assume charge of the health work there. Epidemic conditions were especially grave in both places, and inoculation of several hundred thousand persons had to be arranged in order to prevent spread of contagions. Nursing the injured, the sick, aged and young and caring for the newborn were heavy tasks in both areas.

The Red Cross nurses also were called upon for work in epidemics in communities, including the serious septic sore throat epidemic in New England and a typhoid epidemic in New York state.

More than 550 Red Cross Chapters throughout the nation operate nursing services which they support altogether or in part.

Crowds Gather at Daylight at Piers

New York, Nov. 14 (AP).—Crowds of relatives and friends, many of them uncertain as to whether their relatives have been saved, gathered at daylight at the piers of the first two rescue ships bringing survivors of the Vestris.

Outside Pier 1 in Rector street, the home pier of the American shipper, which rescued 125 of the survivors, an anxious crowd of 200 had gathered hours before the ship was due to arrive.

There were traces of tears on the cheeks of many as they gazed out through the early morning mists, straining their eyes for the first sight of the American shipper.

Up the North river at Christopher street another crowd, numbering more than 100, was gathered about the North German Lloyd Line piers where the Berlin, bearing 33 of the survivors, docks. The Berlin was being worked into her dock at 9 o'clock.

They separated into little groups, silent, strained, yet fearful that those they sought might not be among the survivors.

"Why do they take so long?" a woman queried.

She did not know that every resource of the U. S. Public Health Service had been geared to speed to rush the two ships through quarantine, so that their shipwrecked passengers might be landed with the least possible delay.

Special guards of patrolmen were assigned to handle the crowds, but they were hardly needed, the people standing quietly, waiting as countless numbers of others had waited before for news of loved ones missing in a disaster of the sea.

A Tribute to Mrs. Gokey.

In the death of Mrs. Gokey, one of the founders of the Industrial Home and a charter member of the Board of Managers, the members of the organization feel they have lost one who in spite of her declining years always had the interest of the Home children close to her heart.

Her unflinching generosity proved her love for the helpless children so dependent on others for affection and sustenance, therefore, be it resolved, the Board of Managers extend their profound sympathy to the bereaved family of Mrs. Gokey.

Signed,
BOARD OF MANAGERS OF THE INDUSTRIAL HOME.

Few Russian Nihilists

In the years that Nihilism was active in Russia its extent was not known, but the government thought it was a secret organization of considerable size. One of its members now makes a statement that it never had a membership of more than forty, and that the active membership often dwindled to eight.

Several slightly used and shop-worn Fridges at reduced prices. Call Mr. King, Kingston 1499.

Good men!"

"I'll admit, Mr. Foster, that in order to put this plan over successfully, we'll have to increase our sales organization considerably. We'll need more good men, that's true, but judging from our past experiences, we will encounter little difficulty from that score. . . . a descriptive male help wanted ad in The Freeman has never failed to bring us far more applicants than we could possibly use."

LAST NIGHT on the RADIO

Reception Tuesday evening from the six stations was good, with very little local interference. Reception of Governor Smith's address was flawless, giving the fans an opportunity to realize what a good loser, good sport and good American the governor is—far better than many of his supporters and many of his opponents.

Reception this morning was as good as the local burner would permit. This burner is a pest.

There are rumors that television experiments are to be prohibited during the hours in which stations are operating regularly. This should be done. Television noises are a nuisance and an imposition.

Flashes of Life Sketched in Brief

(By The Associated Press.)

New York—His Royal Highness, Infante Alfonso of Spain, cousin of the king, is here to see how Americans live. "On the ground I'm simply a foot soldier," he says, meaning that he is enthusiastic about aviation and professes to know little of other things, such as politics and international affairs. He is a blonde, 6 feet 2, and a major in Spain's flying corps.

Chicago—Mrs. Irene Castle McLaughlin is to enter nine graduates of the municipal pound in the national dog show. They will seek blue ribbons. Hitherto their only awards have been tin cans.

New York—Margaret Lawrence, who dropped suddenly out of the cast of "Possession" three weeks ago, has been suspended for six months and fined two weeks' salary by the Actors' Equity Association.

Vienna—The name of Hoover, it develops, has been written in the stars for nine years come inauguration day. In March, 1929, a star just discovered was named "Hooveria" by the senate of Vienna University.

New York—The Stay Alive Club of America, newly incorporated, seeks to keep members from being killed or killing anybody else. Twenty million motorists will be invited to join.

London—One need of the day, in the opinion of Lady Astor, is a society for the encouragement of men who fear equality with women. "They need not be frightened," she encouraged. "We do not ask for superiority. We have always had that. We only want equality."

New York—Lillian Gish of the films and George Jean Nathan, dramatic critic, insist there was nothing romantic about it; that it meant nothing but the spirit of friendship, but he went down the bay to meet her on her return from abroad.

Pittsfield, Mass.—Coryler Lakin, football fan, must refrain from attending his favorite sport for a year. That's the punishment imposed by a judge because a referee of a high school game was walloped in Dalton, the late Senator Murray Crane's home.

Pittsburgh, Pa.—J. L. Marks, dean of Kiski, a preparatory school, thinks football is the world's one best way to overcome boys' natural hatred of work. He so told the Pittsburgh Advertising Club.

Lexington, Ky.—Methodist ministers have refused to accept for an orphanage in Louisville some of the receipts of a charity race meet held at E. R. Bradley's Idle Hour Farm. Some $650 is to be given to crippled children of Lexington instead.

To the first half-million new Ford owners

TO THE half-million men and women who have received new Fords in the last eleven months, there is no need to dwell on the performance of the car.

You have tested its speed on the open road. In traffic you have noted its quick acceleration and the safety of its brakes. You know how it climbs the hills. On long trips and over rough stretches you have come to appreciate its easy-riding comfort. Continuous driving has proved its economy of operation and low cost of upkeep.

This is an invitation to you to take full advantage of the service facilities of the Ford dealer organization so that you may continue to enjoy many thousands of miles of carefree, economical motoring.

The point is this. You have a great car in the new Ford. It is simple in design, constructed of the best materials and machined with unusual accuracy. It is so well-made, in fact, that it requires surprisingly little attention. Yet that doesn't mean it should be neglected. Like every other fine piece of machinery, it will serve you better and longer if given proper care.

One of the best ways to do this is to take your car to the Ford dealer every 500 miles for oiling and greasing and a checking-up of the little things that have such a great bearing on long life and continuously good performance.

Such an inspection may mean a great deal to your car. To you it means thousands upon thousands of miles of motoring without a care—without ever lifting the hood.

Ford dealers everywhere have been specially trained and equipped to service the new Ford. You will find them prompt and reliable in their work, fair in their charges, and sincerely eager to help you get the greatest possible use from your car for the longest period at a minimum of trouble and expense. That is the true meaning of Ford Service.

Financial and Commercial

New York, Nov. 14 (AP).—Speculation in stocks continued at a terrific pace in today's market, with the general price tendency still upward. Waves of selling swept through the market at intervals, carrying many issues down one to five points, but new leaders were quickly brought forward, and a long list of issues sold one to nearly 12 points higher.

So great was the accumulation of orders that the ticker again fell about an hour behind the market, with indications by early afternoon that sales would again cross the 5,000,000 share mark.

Except for a series of favorable earnings and dividend statements, including a 15 per cent stock dividend on Otis Elevator, there was little news in the day's news to influence the price movement.

Call money was plentiful at the renewal figure of six per cent and there was talk of further imports of British Gold. Gold Street looks forward, however, to another large increase in Federal Reserve Bank's loans tomorrow, and this induced further liquidation by conservative traders and investors.

It is known that the following Presidents were entitled through their ancestry to the use of the heraldic devices known as coats of arms: George Washington, John Adams, Thomas Jefferson, Andrew Jackson, John Quincy Adams, William Henry Harrison, Benjamin Harrison, John Tyler, Millard Fillmore, James Buchanan, Rutherford B. Hayes, James A. Garfield, Grover Cleveland and Theodore Roosevelt.

The kind of efficiency which goes too far in standardizing human effort cannot go as far as mechanical ingenuity does in providing for repairs and replacements.

Chicago intends to have the tallest building in the world. Among those in that city who keep their thoughts turned heavenward are the designers of skyscrapers.

A slogan should be tested out very carefully in private before being launched into publicity. Many slogans have developed marked relationships to the boomerang.

A Columbia professor, making phonograph records of dialects, is trying to find some one who "speaks" Cape Cod. Our supposition had been that it was extinct.

Paid at Last

New York.—After 64 years Uncle Sam has paid a bill. Heirs of Charles Gallagher have been awarded $23,287 because Confederates destroyed his schooner in the James river when it was carrying supplies to Union troops. Because of costs the heirs will receive only $9,374.

Over 3000 mice can be found at Rayleigh, Essex, England, and they are cherished inhabitants whose presence is a source of local pride. They have a home of their own, called the Mousey, feed on specially prepared titbits and are so happy that they will not leave their homes. The mice are bred and sent to universities for experimental purposes.

Dawes at Funeral Of Boyhood Friend

Former Star to Wealth and Fame While Later Became a Waiter. Known as "The Gentleman of the Bowery."

Chicago, Nov. 14 (AP).—Charles G. Dawes, vice president of the United States, returned today from New York where during his crowded hours he took time to lay a casket on the casket of a boyhood pal—Brad Hulbert, a waiter they called "The Gentleman of the Bowery."

It was a fine casket (the Vice President had seen to that) in which Hulbert's body, clad in a dress suit, lay in state in the Globe dressing house. General Dawes had given certain orders, provided certain funds.

"He was my friend," the Vice President said.

Back in Marietta, O., when General Dawes and Brad Hulbert were boys, they were pals. Hulbert's father was a successful engineer, and they lived in one of the finest houses in town. Later young Dawes was to go away, become an engineer himself, become prosperous. Brad Hulbert was to go away, too, but not to the high professional, financial and political peaks of his friends.

The paths of Charles G. Dawes and Brad Hulbert which separated when Hulbert left home at the age of 26, crossed many years later. The one had risen to power in the nation; the other was a waiter, and continued as such until the 60's, crept upon him. Thus it came about that in the days when General Dawes was presiding over the Senate of the United States, Brad Hulbert was earning the sobriquet, "the gentleman of the bowery."

Brad had a manner. Though adversity pushed closely, Hulbert always had a way with him. Trousers were always pressed, shoes shined, nails manicured, and frayed linen kept immaculate. They tell of his strolling along the Bowery, giving a dime to a beggar. He would inquire one's opinion about "the administration at Washington," and this always gave him the opening to remark, "Charlie Dawes, you know, is a friend of mine."

The Bowery didn't believe him, but was too considerate to say so. Then the aging ex-waiter proved it by displaying a letter from Washington.

"It's from Charlie Dawes," he explained. "He's a friend of mine. He sent me some money."

Hulbert died last Saturday night, and the letters from Washington were found. General Dawes, who was in New York, was notified.

Pays Boyhood Debt as Pal Appears in Court

New York.—Two boyhood playmates met recently in court here, the magistrate leaning forward on his bench with sympathy in his face, the prisoner shuffling shamefacedly toward him, a ragged and nerve-wrecked picture of failure.

"Tom, do you remember me?" Magistrate Harry Howard Dale asked.

"Yes, I do," Tom McAllinden answered. His hands shook and his voice quavered. He was being arraigned for the eighteenth time in a Brooklyn court for intoxication. He had been in the workhouse five times. He was fifty-five.

"You and I were playmates," the magistrate recalled. "You were going to be a great lawyer and I was going to be a truck driver."

McAllinden, who now is a truck driver, said he remembered.

"Fate switched things around, didn't it, Judge?" he asked.

"It did, Tom. Don't call me 'Judge.' I'm just Harry to you. I'm still the same Harry you saved from drowning one day when I fell into the water at the end of Grand street, chasing a dog. Now my time has come to do something for you."

"As long as I'm on the bench you'll never go to jail again. Now get out into the sunlight and see if you can't be a man."

Use X-Ray in Plant Breeding in California

Berkeley, Calif.—A new X-ray laboratory for use in plant breeding experimentation has been installed at the University of California and will be available for co-operative researches by workers in other parts of the country. The plan is to have projected experiments submitted in outline to a special committee on X-ray experimentation at the university, and when this committee has given its approval the pollen or other plant material to be X-rayed will be sent to the laboratory, treated and returned to the experimenter, who will observe and report the results obtained. In this way it is hoped to develop new varieties of fruits, crop plants and ornamentals which otherwise might never have come into existence. At the same time results of value from the purely scientific viewpoint are expected.

Two Vessels Land With Survivors

through and through wreckage, seeking further survivors, until noon. Flooded New York Harbor several naval vessels at scene of disaster.

From the captain of the Myrian came a message in French which was translated to read:

"Arrived on Vestris some Monday p. m. I have sixty-four people. Having searched all day fruitlessly, and I leave, proceeding to New York, landing rescued people."

Earlier in the day he had asked the Berlin to take aboard those he had rescued, which he placed at that time at only 15, as he was bound for England from New Orleans and New York is far off his course. The sea was too rough to make the transfer, however, and he decided to come on in.

Several husbands and wives were aboard the ship, and the incomplete list of those saved shows that many of them were separated, in each case one of the couple apparently being lost. The rule of the sea that women and children go first into the boats would account for their separation.

Two wives, Mrs. Norman Batten of Los Angeles, wife of the famous race driver, and Mrs. Yashko Ianoys, wife of the Japanese consul at Buenos Aires, were rescued. No reports have been received of their husbands. "I am alive after terrifying experience," Mrs. Batten wires relatives in California. "I thought I would never live to see you again."

The cause of the disaster continued to remain a mystery.
